Faculty say united Canada will still endure hardships

By SCOTT BOEHMER
Staff editor

Three Eastern professors who were watching the incoming results of Quebec’s election on whether or not to secede from Canada say the close results may further split Canada on the issue.

With more than 99 percent of the polling stations reporting, the federalists had 50.5 percent of the votes to keep Canada united and the separatists had 49.5 percent.

“I think eventually even if there’s a No vote, the secessionists will get what they want,” said Norman Spencer, associate professor of German and acting director of the Coleman foreign language laboratory. “Whatever the vote is, there’s going to be a lot of people who aren’t going to be happy.

Even though the vote favors keeping Canada as one nation, a large part of the population will continue their attempt to separate Quebec, Spencer said.

“I think what you’re seeing in Quebec is a trend since the end of the Cold War, and that is secessionism,” he said. “I think the idea of a sort of bilingual, strong united Canada is out the door and there will be a sort of devolution.”

History professor Roger Beck also said the close vote would cause a great deal of internal instability within Canada which could cause problems in its relationship with America.

“We have the longest unguarded border in the world and that’s because both countries are so stable,” Beck said. “To have an unstable two or more countries north of us would hurt this relationship, which has always been very good for us.”

If Quebec would ever secede, Spencer and the other professors agreed it would have a major effect on Canada’s economy and the way it deals with America.

Heribert Breidenbach, chairman of the German department, said a secession of Quebec would have caused a great deal of problems financially, however he doesn’t believe it will greatly affect America’s relationship with Canada.

“It’s not going to influence (the United States’) economy as far as I can see,” Breidenbach said. “Instead of trading with one Canada, we’re going to be trading with two or three Canadas.”

However, Beck said he believes an independent Quebec would have hurt America’s trading partnership with Canada.

“Canada is one of our most important trading partners and part of that is because

Secession vote unites Quebec

MONTREAL (AP) – By a perilously narrow margin, Quebecers heeded pleas for national unity and voted against secession Monday, sparing Canada a traumatic fracture but leaving the French-speaking province split down the middle.

With more than 99 percent of the 22,400 polling stations reporting, the federalists, with 2,339,414 votes, led by 50.5 percent to 2,294,145 votes, or 49.5 percent, for the separatists.

Federalists celebrated raucously at their headquarters, while separatists – who came closer than many had dreamed a few months ago – wept.

But Quebec’s separatists, who lost a 1980 independence referendum by a 60-40 margin, improved their performance so dramatically this time that they are sure to shake off their disappointment and launch another try.

“Canada on paper may still be a country – but there’s something wrong with this country,” said Louise Beaudoin, culture minister in Quebec’s separatist government. “We had 9 percent more than we had in 1980. Something has to be done.”

About 82 percent of Quebecers are French-speaking, and roughly 60 percent of them voted for separation. As expected, roughly 90 percent of English-of the relaxed relationship we have between the two countries in the regulation of tariffs and trades,” Beck said. “If we have two countries, that economic relationship will be made more difficult for a while at least.”

Spencer said he feels the biggest result of a secession of Quebec would be on the financial markets. “There might be a flight of capital out of Canada.”

Spencer said Canada, and specifically Quebec, has a very large debt, and the No vote would likely cause a great deal of volatility in the financial markets and uncertainty over how it would be dealt with.

Charleston police anticipate no problems during holiday

By BRIAN HUCHEL
City editor

Eastern’s campus and Charleston’s community have little trouble with vandalism and criminal incidents on Halloween night, according to Charleston police.

“There are a lot of mischievous activities that will happen, but there’s only a little increase in cases like criminal damage,” said Charleston Police Chief Herb Steidinger.

He said mischievous activities include incidents such as toilet papering trees and soaping people’s cars.

Although activity does increase during the night, Steidinger said there has not been an increase in activities over the past years. One big factor that dictates the amount of activity on Halloween night is the weather conditions.

“Weather is the big factor,” Steidinger said. “If there’s inclement weather, then it is down. But if there’s higher temperatures, like there are right now, then more people will be out on foot.”

The National Weather Service is predicting a 70 percent chance of showers Tuesday night with highs in the lower 40s.

The amount of mischievous activity is not the only concern of Charleston police. Officers also are going to be looking out for the safety of the trick-or-treaters roaming the streets.

“Drivers need to be careful,” Steidinger said. “Parents need to have costumes that fit their children properly and don’t constrict the child.

“We have situations where one night out of the year you have young children going door to door and crossing the street,” he said. “Inclement weather causes people to start darting out of cars and onto streets without caution.”

Senate plans to distribute newsletter Wednesday

By SCOTT BOEHMER
Student government editor

The Student Senate Wednesday will distribute The Senate Slate, a newsletter to inform Eastern students about the senate’s committees.

Trevor Griffin, chairman of the student awareness committee, which is in charge of producing the newsletter, said it will be distributed to the residence halls, the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union and possibly academic buildings.

Griffin said the newsletter will deal only with senate committees, and not with executive members of Student Government.

“The executive positions weren’t included because they really have no hands on work with the committees,” Griffin said. “It’s two separate entities.”

Senate Speaker Kevin Piket said there will also be a column written by him in The Senate Slate, entitled “The Speaker’s Corner.”

“It summarizes some of the points I made during my senate address and lays out some of the goals I have for the rest of this semester,” Piket said.

Griffin said he received good response from all of the senate members he spoke to, adding he primarily interviewed the chairpersons of the committees.

“Every one of the senate members was more than happy to explain what they do,” Griffin said.

Piket said the committee members themselves also had the option of submitting articles for the newsletter.

The newsletter is published once a semester by the Student Awareness Committee.

Griffin said the newsletter will be distributed in its own bins and possibly placed on the front desks of residence halls, although he said he still has to approve it with hall counselors.

A total of 1,000 copies of the publication have been printed, and Griffin said its distribution will be decided in order to allow it to be available in all areas of the campus.

Crowd totals of Million Man March causing turmoil

BOSTON (AP) – Protest organizers have been complaining about official crowd counts since someone first nailed a hand-lettered placard to a stick.

Hawks and doves become birds of a feather on the issue; activists across the abortion divide stand together.

Now one group has used the National Park Service’s own photographs to cast doubt on the official crowd estimate of the Million Man March. And activists who depend on big numbers to shape policy and public opinion are feeling vindicated.

“You’re trying to show grassroots influence to Congress. ...
“That’s why the numbers are important,” said Michele Arocha Allen of the National Right to Life Committee. “That’s why anyone has a march here.” Organizers of demonstrations by hundreds of thousands of people on the Mall in Washington frequently end up staging a second protest: begging the park service to revise its crowd estimate.
“I’m very glad frankly that somebody who put a team of experts together has gotten some publicity. We did ... and nobody paid any attention,” said Kim Gandy, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women.

In 1989, NOW made its case for a revised count with the help of a landscape architect, an engineer and a mathematician. The group took its own photos and made its own counting grids. But the park service would not budge from its estimate of 400,000 protesters – half NOW’s count.
The stir over the Million Man March, however, has persuaded the park service to review its numbers and its methods. A decision on whether to raise the official estimate is expected in two weeks.

The park service said the Oct. 16 rally drew 400,000 people. The Nation of Islam, one of the organizers, said the march drew 2 million.
Scientists at Boston University’s Center for Remote Sensing, using a computer analysis of 14 park service aerial photos of the crowd, said last week the turnout was between 670,000 and 1.04 million.

Famed 1960s author leaves mark on society

NEW YORK (AP) – Terry Southern, whose screenplays for “Dr. Strangelove” and “Easy Rider” captured an anxiety-ridden, rebellious and spaced-out 1960s America, has died at the age of 71.
Southern collapsed last Wednesday at Columbia University, where he had taught an advanced screenwriting course for a number of years. He died Sunday night at St. Luke’s Hospital.
Cause of death awaited an autopsy, hospital spokesman Michael Scahill said.
Southern’s second novel, “Candy,” a smutty take-off on “Candide” that he co-wrote in 1958 under the name Maxwell Kenton with Mason Hoffenberg, won him an underground following. The next year, his satiric “The Magic Christian” brought Southern to the attention of film director Stanley Kubrick, who was looking for someone to help him adapt another novel, “Red Alert,” for the screen.

Their collaboration, a classic of Cold War paranoia whose full title was “Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb,” was nominated for an Academy Award for best screenplay and received the Writers Guild Award for best screenplay of 1964.
Five years later, “Easy Rider,” a drug culture-open road standard that Southern wrote with the movie’s stars, Peter Fonda and Dennis Hopper, also was Oscar-nominated for best screenplay.
“Terry Southern was one of the great satiric writers of our time,” said Robert Fitzpatrick, dean of Columbia’s School of Arts.
“He was a truly independent voice and imaginative spirit and a generous mentor to young writers.”

Underwear franchise tightens ranks, eliminates 3,200 jobs

CHICAGO (AP) – Underwear maker Fruit of the Loom Inc. said on Monday it will slash its U.S. work force by 12 percent, eliminating 3,200 jobs, to streamline operations and boost profits.
The move reflects the mounting pressure on apparel manufacturers to produce merchandise for the increasingly cutthroat retail industry, an apparel industry analyst said.
The Chicago-based company said it will close six plants and reduce operations at two more by the end of the year. The plants to be closed are in Florence, Ala.; Franklin, Ky.; Acadia Parish, La.; Batesville, Miss.; and Albemarle and Kings Mountain, N.C.
Operations will be reduced in Bowling Green, Ky., and Rockingham, N.C.
“The timing of the consolidation is a reflection of the difficult retail environment for apparel and increasingly competitive nature of the business,”Fruit of the Loom, the nation’s largest maker of underwear and active wear, said in a statement.

The announcement was not a surprise. On Oct. 18, Fruit of the Loom announced a 39 percent drop in third-quarter profits and said it was considering plant closings.
“They have been needing to restructure their operations,” said Leslie McCall of Oppenheimer & Co. “We’re in a consolidation of the retail environment and it’s going to be very, very tough on vendors.” Fruit of the Loom blamed higher cotton prices and poor sales of printed T-shirts, licensed sports apparel, sweat shirts and sweat pants for the drop in third-quarter earnings – to $24.5 million from $40.2 million a year earlier.
About 395 workers at two plants in western Kentucky got the news Monday morning. The company said about 325 of the 500 employees at its Bowling Green plant will lose their jobs, and a shipping and receiving plant in Franklin will close, eliminating 70 jobs.

The cutbacks follow nearly 200 job cuts in August at Bowling Green and 20 jobs cut a week ago at corporate headquarters.
“We are disappointed by the news,” said Dennis Griffin, president of the Bowling Green-Warren County Chamber of Commerce.
He said the chamber was trying to attract a large industry to the area to make up for the lost jobs.
Fruit of the Loom employs 27,000 people in the United States and another 11,000 in Canada, El Salvador, Honduras, Ireland, Jamaica, Mexico and England.
Its stock was unchanged at $18 in late trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

speaking and immigrant Quebecers voted No.
The vote will leave scars in Quebec. But it will hearten the throngs of Canadians from other provinces who joined marches, rallies and vigils last week beseeching Quebec to stay.
A separatist victory would have spelled economic turmoil for Canada – and perhaps the greatest political crisis of its history.
The nation would have lost one-fourth of its people and one-sixth of its land, a fracture without precedent among prosperous Western democracies.
The narrow federalist victory will leave Quebec bitterly divided, with defeated nationalists likely to seek scapegoats and plot a future campaign to achieve a sovereign, French-speaking nation.
The turnout, after a passionate campaign, was exceptionally large: 92 percent of the roughly 5 million registered voters.
In Verdun, a working-class suburb of Montreal, unemployed Bertrand Fontaine, 48, explained his Yes vote.
“I worked 18 years for a company, and now I’ve been unemployed for two years,” he said. “That’s enough. Maybe with new companies here, I’d have new chances. I have nothing to lose.”

Annette Dupuis, 83, said she was proud to cast a No vote in the Montreal suburb of Anjou.
“My country is Canada,” she said. “This is very important to me. If the Yes vote wins... I will shed tears. It will be the death of Canada.”
Prime Minister Jean Chretien, a Quebecer committed to keeping Canada intact, voted in his hometown of Shawinigan, but offered no predictions.
The separatists’ most charismatic voice, parliamentary opposition leader Lucien Bouchard, said Quebecers should take pride in the campaign – one of the few times in world history where citizens were offered a vote on whether to secede.
“We demonstrated in Quebec that we are a democracy – that we can talk to each other,” Bouchard said.
The separatists trailed early in the campaign, which started in September. They pulled into a narrow lead in opinion polls after Bouchard, who lost a leg to a near-fatal disease last year, took charge of the campaign and galvanized supporters with emotional speeches.

The federalists steadied themselves in the closing week with rallies across Canada that expressed support for Quebecers and national unity.
By the end, pollsters said the race was a dead heat, and they were right. They had given an edge to the separatists among decided voters but suggested a majority of the undecided voters could tilt toward staying in Canada.
“I’m hopeful for the No,” Elizabeth Stewart said after voting in a largely anglophone Montreal neighborhood. “I have a lot of relatives who are French-speaking and are on the No side – they just don’t say it in public.” Chretien’s federal government had refused to say how it would respond to a Yes vote.
The separatists, had they won, would not have declared independence immediately. They had offered to negotiate for up to a year on a new economic and political partnership between Canada and an independent Quebec.

New board member promises to serve students, lower tuition

By CHAD GALLAGHER
Administration editor

Betsy Mitchell is still a kid at heart.

Despite being a 41-year-old director of public affairs for Devonshire Realty in Champaign, Mitchell has not forgotten the perspective of a college student and has always lent an ear to students' comments when tuition raises and controversial issues arise, said Thomas Scism, professor of political science, about his former student.

"She will make sure the students are being served – that is something Eastern could use," he said.

Mitchell is one of seven newly appointed Eastern governing board members.

She earned a bachelor's degree and master's degree in arts from Eastern in 1975 and 1980, respectively. Mitchell said one problem the university faces with the new governing board is gaining enough state-appropriated funds to keep tuition raising from occurring.

Betsy Mitchell

The Board of Governors is set for termination Jan. 1 when individual boards will take governance over the five BOG schools.

"(Eastern) can't continually increase tuition so it becomes out of sight for students," Mitchell said. "We also need to highlight student accomplishments and make it so students really enjoyed coming to Eastern because I know I did."

Since state funding is diminishing and schools are no longer completely state-supported institutions, Mitchell said it will be up to alumni and joint corporation partnerships to generate money.

Mitchell, also a registered contract lobbyist for the Cook-Witter governmental consulting firm, said her fund-raising advice and governmental background should benefit the new board.

"My interest in higher education and business background dealing with the legislation are my strong points," she said. "I work a lot with (Gov. Jim Edgar's) staff in Springfield and with a lot of people who attended EIU."

Mitchell said it is important for Eastern to have a high presence throughout the state and country because "if you are not known out there no one wants to give you any money."

"We need to let the world know all about the good things Eastern is doing and highlight the special things that happen on campus."

Settlement is finally reached in 1992 hit-and-run civil lawsuit

By BRIAN HUCHEL
City editor

A lawsuit stemming from a 1992 hit-and-run death of Charleston resident Crystal June Melton, scheduled to go to trial Monday, was settled out of court.

A civil lawsuit filed by Melton's mother, Mary Melton, claims Logan Davis and his employer, Baldwin Car Dealership, 825 W. Lincoln Ave., were negligent when Davis left the keys of one of the dealership's cars in the vehicle.

The vehicle was parked at Mike and Stan's Tavern, which is located on the corner of Fifth Street and Monroe Avenue.

The car, which was driven by Eddy Forrest, later struck Crystal June while she was riding her bicycle on March 12, 1992. Forrest was sentenced to seven years in prison after admitting in court that he struck Melton.

Davis and Baldwin's attorney, Jerry Stocks, said prosecuting attorney Ronald Tulin approached him with a settlement that included a "reasonable sum" early last week.

"In no way, shape or form should the settlement represent liability on the part of my clients," Stocks said. "Any trial has its risks, but we still are confident that had we gone to trial, we would have been successful in proving our case."

Had the lawsuit gone to court and negligence on the part of Davis and Baldwin was proved, it would have been left up to a jury to decide Melton's monetary compensation.

Tulin had said previously that substantial settlements are usually given by a jury in cases where a parent loses a child.

Stocks would not comment on the monetary total from the settlement because it had not been finalized. He said the finalizations could take anywhere from two to four weeks.

"It basically deals with the paperwork involved," Stocks said. "There are only a few minor issues outstanding."

Tulin refused to comment on the settlement, saying his client, Mary Melton, wants to let attention to the case subside.

Stocks said he did not see any reason why the settlement between the parties should fall through, adding the settlement proposal did not surprise him.

BGC has legitimate concerns about Union, coverage

The black community's boycott of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union, as well as The Daily Eastern News, will hopefully spark the entire university toward substantive change.

Both the Black Greek Council and Black Student Union have called for a boycott on Union facilities and The News. Organizations have been asked to hold meetings outside the Union and the BGC and BSU will stop using the newspaper to publicize its events.

Leaders from the BGC and BSU met with President David Jorns on Friday to list their concerns. Not one should be ignored. The students are concerned about a lack of minority faculty and staff in the classroom and in residence halls, minority scholarships, and the lack of minority representation in the administration.

At least 10 minority faculty and staff members left Eastern last year. Eastern needs to find replacements and increase minority representation.

Also, the new policy barring dances and other student events in the Grand Ballroom is the second Union rule in recent years that alienates the black community.

In September 1993, Union officials considered banning canes, prohibiting loud singing, dancing and chanting, and limiting dance times in the Union. Canes, while at first viewed as a deadly weapon to some, are harmless trademarks of one black fraternity on campus.

Now this new policy, while offending a wider portion of the campus, drives home a message. Many of the BGC and BSU dances are in the Union.

The boycott of the Union is an effective way to drive home the point to the university about the plight of students.

Editors at The News agree that there needs to be an improvement in their minority coverage. This week will be devoted to starting a dialogue within the staff and amongst the campus's black leadership to find solutions to long-standing problems.

It should be clear: The BGC and BSU are not whining. These organizations and the members within them are demanding substantive change out of this campus.

In many places it is warranted and the issues should be addressed. Hopefully, the entire campus will take notice.

Bus crash reminds us all to take care

I remember many an infamous ride on the old school bus.

There were few bus rides that didn't include a fist fight between a couple of the neighborhood rivals. Spit ball fights were about as common as seeing teens hang their heads and arms out the windows.

From what I remember, nearly everyone would scamper to the bus each day, hoping to be one of those select few students privileged to sit at the back of the bus — an honor which often seemed comparable to being named homecoming king or queen.

Unfortunately, we were served a grim reminder from last week's school bus-train wreck in Fox River Grove that sitting at the back of the school bus can turn out deadly. So far, seven teens are dead as nearly 30 others were injured in the horrifying crash last Wednesday.

A school bus en route to Cary-Grove High School approached an intersection with train tracks. The driver apparently stopped, didn't see any trains and partially crossed the intersection before stopping at the lights.

With limited or no warning from the crossing signals, a commuter train plowed into the back of the bus, which was traveling too fast to stop in time to avoid an accident. The train plowed into the portion of the school bus hanging over the train tracks.

"The gates started to flash and the bus moved up. I saw the gate hit the bus. Next thing I know the train hits the bus and there were pieces flying everywhere," witness John Thorpe was quoted in a Chicago Tribune article.

So now, federal and local investigators will spend weeks, months and possibly years trying to unravel why and how an accident of this magnitude injured and kills so many teens.

JOHN FERAK
Regular columnist

"The Fox River Grove accident reminds us how deadly and horrific car-train accidents turn out."

There's no doubt that countless lawsuits will probably be filed over this puzzling and gruesome accident.

The Fox River Grove accident reminds us how deadly and horrific car-train accidents turn out. It reminds us not to assume we can beat a train just because it's distant from the intersection we may be crossing.

Even I've been guilty of driving over train tracks and ignoring warning lights because the train was barely in sight.

Train accidents may seem as rare to us as snowstorms in July, but they do occur. As we witnessed last week, train-car accidents can wipe out a young person's entire future in a matter of seconds.

Last week's tragedy sends us a warning signal that tragedies come in all shapes and sizes. Actually, accidents are the most potent killer of people under the age 25.

Tragedies as the Fox River Grove accident serve to remind us that death and destruction constantly hover around us like a hungry vulture.

As those teenagers sitting at the back of the bus must have felt helpless seconds before Wednesday's train-bus crash occurred, so too are our lives often defenseless against tragedy.

Wednesday's accident shouldn't teach us to be wary of bus drivers. Instead, we realize, once again, that train intersections are deadly. While it's important to have fun, we should learn that being safe and cautious occasionally outweighs living on the edge and taking risks.

Especially when a tragedy or an accident can be averted.

Rumor story offended black community

Dear editor:

My name is Leslie Bates and I am a freshman here at Eastern. I am writing to comment on the story that was published in the Oct. 24 edition of The Daily Eastern News regarding black fraternities and fraternity violence ("Untrue rumor of frat violence re-emerges after attack"). First of all, let me start by saying I am not in a fraternity because I am female, I am not greek because I am a freshman, but I am black so I take offense to what was said in the article.

Secondly, it offends, I know probably the entire black community on campus for something like that to be published without, and I repeat, WITHOUT concrete evidence.

As far as the young lady that stated she doesn't know why black fraternities are still operating and she doesn't know why they are still allowed on campus: Who gives her the right to judge anyone or anything? Who gives her the right to say who should or should not be allowed on campus? Why should white fraternities be allowed on campus? Whatever happens on Northern's campus and Western's campus should remain on their campuses. This is your turn

Eastern!

With any process involving a fraternity/sorority, it is about unity and brotherhood/sisterhood, not prejudice and violence. As far as the rumors, if you want to get technical, no black fraternity on this campus QUACKS!

The victim who was attacked said no rape occurred. It was said that the rumors were misconstrued to the point that some students called it rape. For you people who don't know what rape is, let me explain it to you. According to Webster's Dictionary, rape is an act of forcible sexual intercourse. Where did you get rape out of "he grabbed my arm and shook me and scared me"?

If the attack did occur I sympathize with the young lady, but who's to say the young man was GREEK? If he is acting ignorant he only reflects himself not the entire black greek community!

Burning newspapers has no place at college

Dear editor:

I am writing this letter in response to all the people who burned The Daily Eastern News on Oct. 24. This is supposed to be a place of higher learning. If the people burned the newspapers out of anger, they are illiterate.

If they could read they would see that the newspaper clearly stated in its story, "Untrue rumor of frat violence re-emerges after assault," that the rumor was just that: a rumor. It was false. It was printed to give students the facts, not lies. People have to stop crying and grow up.

Besides, this isn't Woodstock. Are you going to burn the American flag next? If these people that can't read took more time studying than burning papers, maybe they would understand the paper a little better next time.

Patrick Vincent

Letter policy

The Daily Eastern News encourages letters to the editor concerning local, state, national or international issues.

Letters should be less than 350 words. For the letter to be printed, the name of the author, the author's address and telephone number must be included. If necessary, letters will be edited according to length and space at the discretion of the editorial page editor or editor in chief.

Anonymous letters will not be printed.

Folk, alternative singer to perform in Union

Roger Day set to perform
REM, Pearl Jam
and originals

By BRITT CARSON
Staff writer

An alternative/folk singer and songwriter who also does cover songs from such bands as U2, REM and Pearl Jam, will be performing Wednesday on campus.

Roger Day will sing and play his own songs along with covers at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Rathskeller in the basement of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

"All of Day's music has something to say – there's a story behind each song," said Jam Bagwanedee, performing arts committee coordinator for University Board. "He is totally in tune with the audience and with the way he handles the crowd."

Tickets for the show are $1 for students with ID's and $3 for the public.

Bagwanedee said Day performs all his songs acoustically and describes him as a "very smooth and laid back artist." Day stands out from past UB artists at Eastern because during the show he tells the stories behind his songs to the audience, she said.

Bagwanedee described Day's music as alternative with a little folk but emphasized a person has to hear it to truly define it.

Day has toured over 500 colleges and recently released his second CD titled "One equal Road," which is a follow up to his debut CD "Rich Man, Poor Man, Beggarman, Thief."

Day's first CD was named as one of the top ten independent releases in 1993 by Performing Songwriter Magazine.

Bagwanedee said Day performed last year at Eastern and UB received positive feedback through turnout and student reaction.

State Rep. Mike Weaver gears up for 7th election

By MELANIE McCLAIN
Staff writer

State Representative Mike Weaver has promised to concentrate on more higher education funding in his 1996 General Assembly re-election campaign.

Weaver, R-Ashmore, who was first elected in 1984 and is completing his sixth term in the Illinois House, announced Thursday he would run for re-election in the Illinois House from the 106th District.

Weaver said he chose to run for re-election because he accomplished more goals in the state legislature this year than he has in past years.

"This season was probably the best we ever had," Weaver said. "I've been working on the reorganization of higher education and it finally got a vote."

Although no candidates currently have announced plans to run against him, Weaver said he is prepared to have an active campaign.

"It's early in the year still," he said. "It's hard to say who may jump out of the woodwork. I've always had someone run against me."

Weaver, who is Chairman of Appropriations and Vice Chairman of Higher Education, said if he is re-elected, a joint analysis will be done between the House Higher Education Committee and the House Appropriations Committee. This analysis is intended to take an in-depth look at higher education funding at state-funded universities.

In order to reach this goal, Weaver said the committees will be starting a series of hearings on various university campuses. The first hearing will be Nov. 27 at Eastern.

"I want to take an in-depth look at higher education and how the money is budgeted and spent," Weaver said.

Student visits Canada to attend treaty seminar

By JESSIE BRITSTOW
Staff Writer

An Eastern student recently had the experience of being one of 23 college students from the U.S. and Europe to attend the 41st General Assembly of the Atlantic Treaty Association in Toronto.

John Hayden, a graduate student and political science major, was selected to attend the youth seminar hosted by the Atlantic Council, from October 3 to October 7.

The Atlantic Council, located in Washington D.C., sponsors the Youth Seminar for students in the social sciences field.

According to Wolfgang Schlaugh, Eastern's Study Abroad Coordinator, the purpose of the seminar is for students and various government officials to discuss the status of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

Students serve as delegates at the Council and are given the opportunity to ask the General Assembly speakers questions about NATO.

Hayden was one of the seven U.S. students selected to attend the Youth Seminar. "I felt honored to be one of the seven U.S. students attending," stated Hayden in a written report of his experience.

According to Schlaugh, Hayden is not the first Eastern student to attend the Youth Seminar. Six students from Eastern have attended the Youth Seminar before.

To be selected, Hayden was first interviewed by Schlaugh and by his adviser. After the interviewing, recommendation letters were sent to the Council, which makes the final decision on who will attend the Youth Seminar.

Chorus to host auditions for Christmas concert

By REAGAN BRANHAM
Activities editor

Eastern's Oratorio Chorus will be hosting auditions for faculty, staff and community members to be part of the choral presentation "Messiah" during the Christmas concert.

It is rare opportunity for anyone interested in singing because the performances are open for public audition once every four or six shows, said Robert E. Snyder, director of choral activities and a music professor at Eastern.

"(People auditioning) are very appreciative of the opportunity to sing," Snyder said. "They have the opportunity of performing major choral orchestral pieces."

Rehearsals will begin Monday for the Dec. 10 performance. For additional information about the rehearsals contact Snyder at the music department at 581-3010.

Snyder said the Oratorio

Chorus is a combination of the concert choir and the university mixed choir.

Snyder said he can have only 25-30 auditioned members in "Messiah" because of the lack of space on the stage.

In the past, faculty and community members have been very excited about the performance because of the lack of opportunities people have to sing with large groups.

Snyder said auditions will be held for anyone interested regardless of singing ability.

"I like to hear their voice and listen to the quality of their voices," Snyder said.

This concert will be Snyder's last, ending a 26-year career in Eastern's music department. He will be retiring in December.

During his 26 years, Snyder said he has directed over 100 performances and has done "Messiah" seven times.

Student arrested Friday for pushing food worker

By BRIAN HUCHEL
and THERESA GAVLIN
Staff writers

An Eastern student was arrested Friday afternoon and charged with battery for pushing a Dining Service supervisor.

Deena White, 19, of 332 Pemberton Hall, was arrested at 12:34 p.m. when she was informed by Mary Lynn Cobb, a supervisor in Pemberton Dining Service, that she could not take a banana out of the cafeteria. White told Cobb that no one could stop her from taking the banana.

Cobb then proceeded to stand in front of the door to the cafeteria, and White told her if she didn't move from the doorway, she would physically move her.

When Cobb refused to move, White pushed her from the doorway and left the area, taking the banana with her.

In other campus arrests:

Phillip Duane Morris Jr., 22, was charged with possession of burglary tools at 12:30 a.m. Friday.

Morris informed Campus Police that the metal-cutting pliers in his possession were to cut the locks from bikes to steal them.

Morris was spotted riding a very small bike between the Life Science Building and the Life Science Annex. When Campus Police asked Morris to stop, he picked up speed.

Campus Police chased after Morris and yelled, "Stop, police," but Morris continued to pick up speed and pull away from the officer.

When Morris reached the Fine Arts Building, he left the bike in the bushes and continued to run behind the Clinical Services Building, where he was apprehended.

On the way to the University Police Department, Morris told the officer he had not stolen any bikes, but had planned to do so while on campus.

Morris was read his rights and said he could not read or write very well, having only completed eighth grade.

At first, Morris said the bike was his and ran from Campus Police, because he thought he wasn't supposed to be on campus.

After further questioning, Morris said the bike he had been riding was not his.

Morris had been riding with Jim Farris, of Mercer's Trailer Court on 17th Street, but the two had split up after they stole the bicycle, agreeing to meet back at the trailer court.

Morris was transported to Coles County jail where he is being held pending bond.

Detroit douses 'Devil's Night'

DETROIT (AP) — Hundreds of vacant buildings were razed so they couldn't be set on fire and thousands volunteered to patrol the streets Monday for this year's drive against the destructive Devil's Night tradition.

"The primary thing is to keep the fires away, to protect lives and property," said Cliff Russell, a spokesman for Mayor Dennis Archer.

The night before Halloween has for years been celebrated as Devil's Night in Detroit, a night of arson fires in trash piles and houses.

Devil's Night fires peaked at 297 in 1985, but declined after then-Mayor Coleman Young initiated a major anti-arson campaign enlisting thousands of Detroiters to safeguard their city.

Late Sunday, firefighters reported 35 fires, short of the city's daily average of 40 to 60 blazes.

This year, at least 25,000 volunteers signed up to patrol streets, a number similar to previous years during Young's administration.

Juveniles were under a 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew.

One year ago, during Archer's first year in office, fires increased again, up to 182.

"Things didn't go very well last year. The mayor started work on this Nov. 1 last year," said city spokeswoman Michelle Zdrowski.

The mayor joined the volunteer patrols on Sunday night.

"I didn't see much of him last year, but it's a great sign that he's out and about this year," said Harold Hicks, a veteran of six

Genes may influence sexual orientation

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have found new evidence that a gene inherited from mothers helps influence whether a man is homosexual, bolstering a study that made headlines in 1993.

"Our result says that genes are involved in male sexual orientation, although they certainly do not determine a person's sexual orientation," said Dean Hamer, an author of the study.

"There probably are other biological factors like hormones, for example, and other variables we simply don't know anything about yet." The study follows others that have suggested a biological influence in sexual orientation, but scientists still can't explain what makes a person homosexual, heterosexual or bisexual.

The latest study does not identify a specific gene. But like Hamer's 1993 study, it suggests such a gene resides in a particular region of the X chromosome, one of the microscopic thread-like structures that carry genes. Men inherit the X chromosome from their mothers.

Hamer said there was no way to know how strongly the gene influences the development of homosexuality in men. Researchers looked for such an effect in women but found no evidence for it.

Hamer, a researcher at the National Cancer Institute,

“Our result says that genes are involved in male sexual orientation, although they certainly do not determine a person's sexual orientation.”

—Dean Hamer,
author of 1993 genetics study

reports the work in the November issue of the journal Nature Genetics with colleagues at the institute, the University of Colorado and the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research in Cambridge, Mass.

Dr. Elliot Gershon, chief of the clinical neurogenetics branch of the National Institute of Mental Health, said the work does not prove such a gene exists in the chromosome segment, but it is suggestive.

The study focused on a region of the X chromosome that had been identified by the 1993 study.

In a man, this region can get its genetic material from either of his mother's two X chromosome versions. As a result, two brothers normally have about a 50-50 chance of sharing the same version of the genetic material within this region.

Performers inducted into Rock and Roll Hall of Fame

CLEVELAND (AP) — The psychedelic sounds of the 1960s and pioneering performers of the '70s mark the 1996 inductees into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum.

The class of '96 includes Jefferson Airplane, David Bowie, Pink Floyd, the Velvet Underground, Gladys Knight and the Pips, Little Willie John and the Shirelles. Early influence Pete Seeger and FM radio pioneer Tom Donahue will also be inducted in a Jan. 17 ceremony in New York City.

Rock Hall Director Dennis Barrie and Rock Hall Foundation

Executive Director Suzan Evans, announced the inductees Monday.

"I think it's a great list," Barrie said. "It shows the breadth of rock 'n' roll. The fact that it goes from a Little Willie John to a Pink Floyd ... shows how vigorous the music has been over the years." Barrie also announced that the hall, which had its grand opening over Labor Day weekend, expected to welcome its 175,000th visitor this week. Because the demand for tickets to the $92 million rock shrine remains high, the hall will begin opening Mondays in mid-November, Barrie said.

To be eligible for induction, a rockers must have recorded at least 25 years ago. Some 800 musicians, critics and other rock experts voted on the inductees from among nominees selected by a committee.

Bowie, who began as a cult phenomenon in England in the 1960s and later emerged as a leading performer of the '70s and '80s, already is represented in museum displays.

Pink Floyd, best known for its surreal stage shows and phenomenal "Dark Side Of The Moon" album — which spent 741 weeks on the Billboard chart — has also donated artifacts to the museum.

Jefferson Airplane emerged from the San Francisco scene, mixing folk rock, blues and psychedelia on such hits as "Somebody to Love" and "White Rabbit." Gladys Knight and the Pips had hits in 1967 with "I Heard It Through The Grapevine" and in 1973 with "Midnight Train to Georgia." Little Willie John, a soul and blues performer from the 1950s, co-wrote the song "Fever," which became a hit for Peggy Lee. The Shirelles, a girl group founded in 1957, sang "I Met Him On a Sunday" in 1959 and "Soldier Boy" in 1962.

The Velvet Underground's hits include "Waiting for My Man" in 1967 and "Rock and Roll" in 1970.

Seeger, 76, wrote or co-wrote such folk standards as "Turn! Turn! Turn!" and "If I Had A Hammer." His social activism has been as much an influence as his music.

Donahue was an executive at KMPX and KSAN in San Francisco in the 1960s and 70s. He led a rebellion against Top 40 radio that continues today in the battle for dominance between rigidly formatted radio stations and college and alternative stations.

Spikers clinch post-season berth with victory

The Eastern volleyball team clinched a berth in the Mid-Continent Conference post-season tournament over the weekend. And only part of the clinching was done by the Panthers themselves. The other half came from Valparaiso.

After Eastern swept three conference opponents in Lantz Gym during Homecoming weekend, one of which was Valparaiso, the team was close to clinching second place in the Mid-Con – an important standing because only the top two teams out of the Mid-Con's West and East Divisions qualify for the tournament. But the Panthers got some help from Valparaiso when the Crusaders knocked off Western Illinois at Macomb Sunday afternoon.

Western's loss guarantees Eastern second place in the Mid-Con East Division. Had Western defeated Valparaiso, Eastern would have needed a road win against the University of Missouri at Kansas City this coming week-end to clinch second place.

Now Eastern can begin gearing up for the Mid-Con tournament, which will be held at the Western Division's first place team's home court. Right now that site appears to be either the University of Buffalo or Youngstown (Ohio) State, according to head coach Betty Ralston.

Eastern, if it remains the No. 2 seed out of the East, would face the West Division's No. 1 team while Valparaiso (No. 1) would play the West's No. 2 team in semifinal matches.

Before she learned of Valparaiso's Sunday win over Western, Ralston said that it would not make a difference in how Eastern prepared for its match with UMKC this weekend.

"No matter what happens, we're not going to take them lightly," Ralston said after her team defeated Chicago State on Sunday for its fourth straight victory.

Players of the Week: Eastern had two players named Mid-Con Players of the Week for last week's matches – sophomore setter Kara Harper and sophomore middle hitter Lorri Sommer. Harper was named Mid-Con Setter of the Week while Sommer was made Mid-Con Offensive Player of the Week.

"Getting this didn't even cross my mind," Sommer said Monday. "I didn't think I had very good hitting games in a few matches, but I guess somebody did. But I was really surprised – I had no idea. Hopefully we can keep having someone get these awards."

Sommer hit .348 against Northeastern Illinois Friday and .378 against Valparaiso Saturday.

For the week, Sommer notched 32 kills to go with her 26 digs defensively.

Harper had her season high for assists with 65 against Valparaiso and entered the Eastern volleyball record book again as the fourth highest single match assist total in Eastern history.

"This wasn't something I thought about," Harper said. "Friday and Saturday I thought we all played well. But Sunday I thought we kind of let down. But I didn't really even know that they (Mid-Con) had this award until now."

Valpo neutrality a difference?: Now that Eastern has clinched second place in the East Division, it will face the No. 1 team out of the West. If the Panthers win their first round tournament match and Valpo wins its, the two teams will square off in the conference finals. The meeting will then be the teams' third match of this season.

Eastern lost to Valparaiso in three games at Valpo Oct. 13 and knocked off the Crusaders in four games Saturday in Lantz. If home court advantage had anything to do with the outcomes, it will no longer matter come tournament time – the match will be played on neutral ground for both teams.

"I don't think playing at Valpo had anything to do with us losing up there," Harper said. "At a neutral site, we should be able to beat them if we play how we've been playing."

Sommer agreed with Harper that the potential to play Valparaiso on neutral ground could have an advantage headed the Panthers' way. But Sommer said Eastern still needs to focus on beating UMKC.

"We're still concerned with UMKC," Sommer said. "They're a lot like Western Illinois. But after the UMKC match, we will start to focus on Valparaiso because we could see them in the tournament."

Two new head coaches ready for next season

Knight elevated to new spot; set to bring back Big Red Machine

CINCINNATI (AP) – More aggressive in his baseball philosophy than his predecessor and more willing to play to the owner's fondness for dogs, Ray Knight on Monday became manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

The hiring completes a transition that's been in the works for a year. Davey Johnson, let go after leading the Reds to the NL championship series, was appointed the Baltimore Orioles' manager an hour later Monday.

Knight agreed to a two-year contract and immediately made it clear there's going to be a big change in how the club is run. He's going to be a lot more fiery, a lot less tolerant.

In short, he'll be a lot different from Johnson, who was characterized as a player's manager.

"Anybody that's labeled a player's manager is generally too soft because you allow them to do anything," Knight said. "I don't believe in that. I believe in discipline. I believe in doing things correctly. I don't want to be known as a player's manager. I don't care if they like me or don't like me. I'm going to treat them fairly." Knight's first news conference as manager turned into an hour-long discussion of how he would have managed the team differently last season, how much he wants to win and how little importance he places on managing experience.

Knight has never managed at any level. Johnson has the best winning percentage of any current manager and won a World Series with the New York Mets in 1986.

Knight said general manager Jim Bowden first raised the possibility of him managing two years ago.

"When I talked to Jim in 1993, I told him I could manage in the big leagues today," Knight said. "It's not that tough of a deal."

"I have got confidence in my ability to understand what's going on. I know this game of baseball. I've always been a winner. I've never lost at anything except golf." His wife, golfer Nancy Lopez, accompanied him to the introduction. She is considered one of the reasons why Knight carried favor with owner Marge Schott, who never took a liking to Johnson.

Schott also attended the news conference and upstaged Knight. As he started to address his audience at Riverfront Stadium, Schott cut him off in mid-sentence and gestured to Lopez.

"Oh, wait a minute. We forgot the most important thing," Schott said, moving toward Knight. "Get out of here. C'mon, Nancy."

Here's the wife, Nancy Lopez. She plays a game, too, but it's a real little ball, right?" Moments later, Knight got a pleased response from his new boss when he remembered what it was like to play on the Reds' championship teams of the mid-1970s.

"What really excited me more than anything is to be here and with Mrs. Schott and Jim reinstall the Big Red Machine – or, the Big Dog Machine," Knight said, turning toward Schott.

Johnson: We'll win a world championship

BALTIMORE (AP) – Davey Johnson finally got the job he coveted, and the Baltimore Orioles signed the manager they rejected in favor of Phil Regan a year ago.

Johnson, who guided the Cincinnati Reds to the NL Central title this season, received a three-year contract Monday from the team he played for from 1965-72.

"I'm a firm believer in the adage that things happen for the best," Johnson said. "I really wanted to be here last year. ... I really felt like I was the man for the job. I felt like I was a perfect fit."

After Baltimore fired manager Johnny Oates last October, Johnson applied for the opening. But the Orioles chose Regan, and Johnson went back to Cincinnati for what he knew would be his last season with the Reds.

While Johnson led the Reds to the playoffs, Regan encountered a myriad of problems in his first year as a major league manager. The Orioles finished 71-73 despite carrying a payroll in excess of $40 million, and Regan was dismissed Oct. 20. That cleared the way for Johnson.

"We got the right man for the job," third baseman Jeff Manto said. "He's got a winning track record and is known as a great motivator. Plus, he's a former Oriole."

Joe Foss, the team's director of business and finance, was part of the committee that had recommended Regan for manager.

"You always think you're making the right decision at the time, and we thought very strongly that Phil was the right man for the Orioles," Foss said. "He made a very significant and useful contribution, and we're sure Davey Johnson will do the same." Johnson has the best winning percentage among active major league managers (.576) and a 799-589 career record as a manager. In 1986 he directed the New York Mets to a World Series championship.

Johnson played in four World Series with the Orioles, and he has always longed to return to the city where he built his fondest memories.

"It sure feels great to be home, and I consider this home," Johnson said. "I've been an Oriole ever since I've been here." The Orioles haven't been to the playoffs since 1983, but Johnson expects to change that. Soon.

"We're going to win next year and we'll win a world championship while I'm here," he said at a news conference.

When asked if that meant 1996, he said: "We have a good chance at it. Coming out of spring training, this ballclub should be the odds-on favorite to win our division." Baltimore finished third in the AL East under Regan, well behind Boston and the New York Yankees.

The Orioles are still looking for a general manager to replace Roland Hemond, who resigned the day owner Peter Angelos fired Regan. Whatever happens in the front office, Johnson says he's not going to let it ruin "my dream job." This is the best thing that could possibly happen to

After missing too many field goals, Rams release kicker

ST. LOUIS (AP) – Rookie Steve McLaughlin missed one short field goal too many. On Monday the St. Louis Rams released him.

The Rams took McLaughlin in the third round of the draft, the highest they've ever taken a kicker, on coach Rich Brooks' recommendation. But McLaughlin missed half his 16 field-goal attempts and was only 2-for-6 between 30 and 40 yards.

Brooks admitted he made a mistake. The Rams likely will use Tuesday's off day to audition replacements and Brooks said he'll have a new kicker in place Wednesday or Thursday.

"I was the one who wanted to draft this young man and I still believe he has the talent to be a good kicker in this league," Brooks said. "He may be one of the better kickers in the league in three-four years, two years, next year, I don't know. But right now it isn't going to happen for him in St. Louis." McLaughlin was wide to the left, a familiar problem, on a 32-yard attempt in Sunday's 20-9 loss to Philadelphia. Almost all his misses have been to the left.

The Rams brought in a sports psychologist to help McLaughlin in the last month. Last week, former NFL kicker Chris Bahr tried to help. Nothing worked.

The last two weeks, McLaughlin missed from 30 and 32 yards and had one blocked from 28 yards. He has 41 points, the least of any kicker who's played in every game.

McLaughlin blamed part of his problem on rushing his approach.

But Brooks said he wasn't good enough on kickoffs, either.

"With the wind at his back, he didn't even get it to the goal line," Brooks said.

Brooks didn't say if the Rams had anyone in mind. He wouldn't say whether the team would hold a tryout.

"You want to have a circus out here?" Brooks said. "You want everybody going, I like this guy, I like that guy? We'll get it done." McLaughlin was unavailable for comment. His former teammates weren't very surprised about the move, considering the Rams are tied for first place in the NFC West and can't afford to blow scoring chances.

"The kid can kick," said backup quarterback Mark Rypien, McLaughlin's holder. "He probably still could get it done, but it's a coaching decision." Brooks said running backs Jerome Bettis and Leonard Russell won't practice at least until Wednesday due to injuries. Bettis aggravated a foot injury and Russell has turf toe.

If neither can play, the top back for Sunday's game at New Orleans would be third-down specialist Johnny Bailey. The Rams also likely would activate Brent Moss, who's spent much of the year on the practice squad.

Brooks said that was just one of several concerns he has about the Rams, who have lost three of four after a 4-0 start. He's also thinking about lineup changes on the offensive line that allowed Chris Miller to be sacked six times Sunday.

Tackle Zach Wiegert, out since the preseason with a severely sprained ankle, saw his first action Sunday and could start against the Saints.

"I'm considering a lot of things right now," Brooks said, "including jumping off the bridge into the Mississippi River or something."

year, averaging 5.9 points per game while shooting 40 percent from the field. She also pulled down 94 rebounds last season and was the fifth leading rebounder on the team.

Despite the loss of Frazier, Laska doesn’t think her loss will have an effect on the chances of this year’s team making a trip to the NCAA tournament.

“With so many new freshmen coming in this season and a lot of the returning players stepping up their level of play, I don’t think her loss will be that big of a factor,” Laska said.

And while Probst agrees with Laska, she does believe that Frazier would have been helpful if she had played this year.

“I think Tourrie would have been an asset to the team because of her speed,” Probst said. “(But) I feel that the freshmen coming in will fill any gaps left by Tourrie and I don’t anticipate the team having any problems with winning this year.”

An effort was made to contact Tourrie Frazier, but she was unavailable for comment.

in the 400-yard individual medley relay, with Habben, Shepherdson, Hisgen and Tanya Rahn swimming a total time of 4:04.63. The final first-place finish the team earned was in the 400-yard freestyle relay, with Lotito, Farella, Ryan Peterson and Hisgen combining for a time of 3:32.38.

Diver Mike Conway finished third in both diving events, pairing up with Sheri Hesker in the 3-meter and Angela Sippell in the 1-meter.

Padovan believed the divers put in a strong effort and was pleased with the results.

The team is back in the pool on Friday at Bradley for a dual meet, but the men will be without Rudy Stefanski and Mike McKay, who is out with a collarbone injury.

Both men’s and women’s teams will travel to Peoria to take on the Bradley Braves on Friday.

lar of the National League East? He was around for the 1982 season, his rookie year, when attendance at Wrigley Field was often less than football crowds at O’Brien Stadium. And that’s pretty sad. Ryno was a Cub during the worst times in team history and was a Cub during the glory seasons of 1984 and 1989, when the team won its division.

They’ll say that he decided that walking away from $17 million was a dumb thing to do, and he now realizes how much cash that really is. Granted, this may be true. But Ryno never really played for the money anyway. After he won the National League MVP award in 1984, his stock soared. Any team in baseball would have paid dearly to get him.

But until his six-year deal ran out in 1989, he did not complain at all to anyone that he wanted a renegotiated contract. Instead he sat back and collected his “meager” $675,000 paycheck – even though he was worth millions.

Critics will say that Ryno is a jerk for retiring to spend time with his family and they will strongly rip on him for deciding to come back now that the Cubs show some promise.

But I have one thing to say to those critics: some no-name basketball player named Jordan pulled the same stunt, and look how well that’s working.

Maybe the best players need to take time off to sort of re-evaluate their lives. Jordan is likely the best guard to ever play in the NBA. Sandberg will go down in history as one of baseball’s best second basemen. Jordan came back to praise, and again lived up to his previous billing.

There’s no reason Ryno won’t do the same. The all-time greats can get away with that I guess. And come April of 1996, you’ll see the Ryno of old – and a Cub resurgence to greatness, because Ryno is ready to roar again.

three touchdowns Saturday, was the runner up for the Gateway Offensive Player of the Week award. Western Illinois running back Brian Knuckles took home the award, as he returned from an injury that sidelined him for three weeks, and ran for a career-high 187 yards and one touchdown.

Mauch has passed for 1,083 yards and seven touchdowns this season, with just three interceptions. His 158.6 total offensive yards per game is the third best average in the Gateway.

Rush on: Eastern continues to be successful rushing the football, as the Panthers collected 167 yards on the ground against Illinois State.

Senior tailback Willie High had 125 yards on Saturday, giving him 1,089 yards on the season and making him just the second Eastern back to gain 1,000 yards in three straight seasons. High is the Gateway’s leading rusher (136.1 yards per game) and is No. 7 in the nation in that category.

The force helping High break through for yardage, is Eastern’s offensive line. Tight end Charlie Roche graded at 94 percent against the Redbirds, including a team-high 17 “extra-effort blocks.”

Center Chris Anderson graded at 92 percent, guard Chris Dunkle graded at 90 percent, tackle Travis Hunerberg at 90 percent and tackle Chris West- enberger at 88 percent.

“We (offensive line) work hard, and I think the big key is that we communicate amongst ourselves,” Westenberger said. “We play physical every day in practice and try to bring that to the games.”

Eastern is No. 1 in the Gate- way and No. 24 in the nation rushing the football, at 216.4 yards per game.

Rush off: The defense held Illinois State to just 62 yards on the ground Saturday. In all five home games this season, the defense has held its oppo- nent to under 100 net yards rushing. Including last year’s home finale against Southern Illinois, the Panthers have held six straight opponents to under 100 yards rushing at O’Brien Stadium.

The Panthers lead the Gateway in fewest rushing yards per game (98.9) and are No. 12 in the nation in that category.

Questions abound in Sandberg's comeback

The news came in Monday afternoon. Ryne Sandberg, my idol, had decided to come out of retirement and play baseball again next year for the Chicago Cubs.

My reaction was similar to the one I gave when a different friend called me last June to inform me that Ryno had retired – I was utterly shocked. But when I saw the story as it came across the Associated Press wire, I finally believed it.

Ryno (I call him Ryno because I have worshiped him for so long now, it's almost as if we know each other personally) retired under some strange circumstances, and much speculation arose as to why he chose to quit the game he was so near perfect at. And more importantly to most people, why did he choose to walk away from a contract that would have paid him roughly $17 million?

But like Mike Schmidt, Dale Murphy and many other true professionals before him, Ryno simply could not stand to continue playing the game when he felt he was not living up to the expectations that were set for him.

Ryno is a perfectionist of sorts. And when he was marred in one of the worst slumps of his career, he woke up one day and decided that he could not sit back and play as poorly as he felt he was playing and collect those big bucks. So he retired.

Rumors were abound that he quit because he was in the middle of a divorce. But in his autobiography, "Second To None," Ryno insists that the divorce had nothing to do with his retirement.

Ryno has now remarried and still has close contact with his children, Justin and Lindsey. And the AP reported that friends say he is more happier now than ever.

But the problem is going to come from people who criticize Ryno for retiring and then unretiring. There will be several things that critics of the game's all-time greatest second baseman will say to rip on Ryno.

They're going to say that he quit when he was playing poorly and when his team was in one of its seemingly life-long losing seasons. They'll say that he quit when the Cubs were at the bottom, and now he wants to come back to play for a Cub team that narrowly missed the playoffs this past season.

But if that's the case, why did Ryno stick around for all of those Cub teams that finished in the Panthers continue climb

Another win – another jump in the Top 25 poll for the Eastern football team.

The Panthers' 31-10 win over Illinois State University on Saturday, coupled with a few losses from teams ranked ahead of Eastern, helped the Panthers jump from No. 18 to No. 15 in the latest Sports Network Division I-AA Top 25 poll.

The No. 15 ranking is the highest ranking for Eastern (7-1 overall, 2-1 in the Gateway Conference) since the 1989 season when the Panthers finished the year at No. 15.

The University of Northern Iowa, which clinched a share of the Gateway title and the league's automatic playoff berth with a two-point win over Southwest Missouri State on Saturday, stayed put at the No. 11 slot.

The Sycamores of Indiana State rounded out the Gateway's showing in the poll, as they jumped five spots from No. 22 to No. 17. Indiana State stunned the two-time defending I-AA champion Youngstown State Penguins 13-6 Saturday in Youngstown, Ohio.

Bad news: On Monday, a specialist looked at the injury suffered by Eastern fullback Chris Szarka in the Panthers' victory over the Redbirds, and concluded Szarka had probably torn his anterior cruciate ligament, and also received a lateral meniscus tear.

"We're not positive, but I'll get the MRI (results) on Thursday," Szarka said. "There's really no more damage I can do to it, so I can walk around on it. But if (the results) are positive, I'll be out three to six months."

Szarka, who lives in Vancouver, British Columbia, scored his first touchdown Saturday. His parents took the five-hour flight in from the West Coast to see him play.

Record breaker: Senior kicker Steve Largent set a Gateway Conference record for point-after conversions after his four PAT's on Saturday gave him 111 for his career. Largent has missed just three of 114 career PAT attempts.

The Indianapolis native also connected on a 37-yard field goal, his 14th of the season which is just one shy of an Eastern single season record. Largent is No. 5 in Division I-AA with 1.75 field goals per game. And he is the leading scorer in the Gateway, averaging 8.25 points per game.

The men's and women's swimming and diving teams experienced a change in its meet format this weekend, as they participated in the University of Northern Iowa's co-ed relay meet on Saturday in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Each relay was composed of two men and two women, and each team was allowed an A and B relay to earn points.

Eastern adapted well to the relay format, finishing second with 304 points, only eight points behind meet host Northern Iowa, which finished with 312.

Northeast Missouri State University finished a distant third out of the five-team field.

Coach Ray Padovan was very pleased with the team and believes this was "a very worthwhile meet."

"It's a nice way of combining men and women in events together and it's become a spectator event with over 300 people attending the meet," Padovan added.

Eastern captured first in six of the 12 relays, and of those six, set four new meet records. The team opened the meet with a win and a new meet record in the 400-yard butterfly relay, with a time of 3:54.00, beating the previous time of 3:54.14 set by Bradley University in 1994. Swimming for Eastern in the relay was Curt Herrin, Doug Habben, Maridee Hisgen and Jessica Stowell.

A first place finish was also earned by the 400-yard backstroke relay in a time of 3:58.98, with Patrick Johnson, Shelley Untersee, Matt Lotito and Nellie Farella making up the squad.

In the 800-yard freestyle relay, Habben, Andrea Peters, Lotito and Farella easily crushed the old record of 7:54.67, touching in 7:50.61.

Continuing its successful meet, Eastern went one-two in the 400-yard medley relay, earning another meet record with a time of 3:57.44. Untersee, Drew Shepherdson, Stowell and Lotito combined for the winning time. Eastern's second-place relay

Ryno declares comeback

All-star infielder ready to return to The Show

NEW YORK (AP) – Ryne Sandberg, the All-Star second baseman who abruptly retired from baseball in the middle of the 1994 season, will return to play for the Chicago Cubs next year, The Associated Press learned Monday.

Sandberg's comeback with the Cubs will be announced today, a team management source told the AP. Terms were not immediately available.

He may move to play third base next year. Sandberg began his Cubs' career at that position in 1982 before shifting and becoming one of the best all-around second basemen in the game's history.

Sandberg joins Michael Jordan as the second famous Chicago athlete who wore uniform No. 23 to unretire this year. Like Jordan, Sandberg decided he'd been away too long from a sport he always loved.

Sandberg was placed on the voluntarily retired list by the Cubs on June 13, 1994, after his sudden retirement at age 34. But the 10-time All-Star will return next year at 36.

He is a career .289 hitter with 245 home runs and 905 RBIs. He is closing in on the record for home runs by a second baseman, held by Joe Morgan at 266, and a nine-time Gold Glove winner.

Lady Panther guard defers senior season

By BRIAN LESTER

While the women's basketball team is expected to build on last season's success, which saw the Lady Panthers win 16 games and advance to the second round of the Mid-Continent Conference Tournament, it will be without the services of senior guard Tourrie Frazier.

Frazier, who only started one game last season, but played numerous games off the bench, decided not to return for her senior season according to head coach John Klein.

"The reason she (Tourrie) is not in school anymore is because she chose not to come back this year," Klein said. "Basically, she wasn't enrolled for the fall semester."

And according to sophomore guard Jess Laska, the team knew that Frazier was not going to be on the team before the school year ended last May.

"We knew she wasn't coming back this year before we went home for the summer," Laska said. "As for the reason, I don't know why she isn't returning this year."

But according to junior forward Sarah Probst, Frazier left the team because of other interests.

"Tourrie found that she had other ambitions besides finishing her degree at Eastern, and so she went to beauty school," Probst said. "She is happy though with what she is doing now, and I think the players are also happy for her."

Frazier was the team's sixth leading scorer last
